Business Men Urged To Accept NRA Voluntarily

Under Blue Eagle Now, Columbus Man Tells Kiwanis Club at Weekly Luncheon.

Business men and other employees urged to comply voluntarily with the NRA before it becomes mandatory on Sept. 1, for all employers who have not signed the blanket agreement previously or signed a code that has been accepted by the government as a substitute for the agreement, Mr. Starkey said.

Local NRA committees, he said, have been unable to get much information from Washington, due to the mass of detail to be handled there regarding the application of the blanket agreements, and in most cases the local committees are doing "horse sense" in interpreting the agreement to employers.

New School Problem Faced with Ban on Child Labor Raising Enrollment

With adoption of NRA codes child labor is passing more and more out of the industrial picture, while hundreds of thousands of young people thus released turn toward the country's schools, already heavily burdened. It is estimated that there are about 2,000,000 children under 17 employed in American industries. Educators are considering the prospect that school enrollments might be increased by that number.

How well equipped is the nation's school system to teach the new pupils considered certain to come as a result of the NRA's elimination of child labor from many industries? This is the first of three articles dealing with the question.

By ALEXANDER R. GEORGE
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25—The nation's school system, already crippled by lack of funds and facilities to care for normal educational needs, faces an extra burden this fall.

Thousands of children, released from the wage earners' ranks by elimination of child labor under the various industrial codes, will be seeking their places in schools where classes have been overcrowded and where educational services have been eliminated or drastically curtailed.

Shorter Sessions Likely

Officials of the National Education association predict that owing to the shortage of funds and to widespread retrenchment, the average school year of 1933-1934 will be shortened two months, a curtailment double that of the preceding year.

Dr. William G. Carr, assistant director of the research division of the association, says that in the last school year more than 250,000 children were allowed to attend school only on a part-time basis and an additional 150,000 were housed in portable shacks.

Last Year's Schooling Inadequate

The records indicate, he says, that an exceedingly inadequate and brief educational opportunity, and in some cases no education at all, was offered last year to about 300,000 American boys and girls.

The number of children who will be released from child labor to return to school under the industrial codes cannot be determined definitely, educators say. Dr. Carr has estimated that roughly 2,000,000 out of 31,000,000 children from 5 to 17 years of age are employed.

What would normally happen if some 2,000,000 young Americans were taken out of factories, mills and mines and from behind store counters and placed in school?

New Teachers, Buildings Needed

Dr. Carr says that in addition to the opening up of their jobs to unemployed adults, at least 80,000 additional teachers and 20,000 new school employees of other types would be required adequately to instruct this new army in the schools.

Hundreds of new school buildings would be needed.

Yet, owing to the lack of funds and to drastic economies in school expenditures, there has been delay, he says, in the construction of some 4,000 needed rural schoolhouses while more than 15,000 rural school districts are not making the necessary minor repairs to keep their buildings and equipment from deterioration.

Enrollments Rising

He points out that while the supply of educational opportunity is diminishing, the demand continues to increase. Each year there have been approximately 200,000 more children enrolled in the public schools than the year previous.

Meanwhile, there has been a decreasing number of teachers which, combined with the increasing number of pupils means a higher pupil-teacher ratio and in most schools an increased size of class. There was a general tendency, however, to increase class size in city school systems before the depression.

With the prospect of a greatly increased enrollment and a further retrenchment in expenditures, educators are apprehensive that the school crisis this year will be even more acute than it was last year.

Prices are going UP!

Every Department on All 4 Floors Offers Values TOMORROW That Can Not Be Offered Again

Practically every line of manufactured goods has advanced in price 20, 30, 40, 50% and more from former levels. It is no longer a matter of choice. We are faced with a very definite trend upward, and neither stores nor individuals can state with any degree of certainty how far the advance is likely to carry. The program outlined in President Roosevelt's Industrial Recovery Bill indicates the importance attached to a higher level of prices generally. We therefore emphatically urge the public and our patrons to consider well the opportunities offered tomorrow—to anticipate their needs well ahead and BUY NOW. Immense purchases made for this event before the advance in prices enable all to realize savings NOW that LATER ON MAY SEEM INCREDIBLE.

North Canaan Church To Celebrate Anniversary

Special to The Star.
CALEDONIA, Aug. 25.—The church at North Canaan, M. E., is celebrating the anniversary of the first Methodist class in the big cabin home of Jacob Geary, who planned for the church. Services will be held all day, Sunday school at 9:30 a. m., morning worship at 10:30, church at 12:30 in the community house or grove. At 2 p. m., Rev. F. W. Hays of Caledonia, former pastor of the Caledonia charge, will speak and at 7:30 p. m., Rev. J. D. Green of Bucyrus, a former pastor of the Caledonia charge, will preach. Special music is being arranged for all these services.

The particular spot where this class was organized is situated far from the Tidewater pumping station and the cemetery south of Canaan church.

Five members constituted the class, all men. The first church building of brown logs was erected in 1816. Rude benches and pulpit desk suffered at that time. A huge granite boulder still remains in the church yard just west of the present frame structure, marking the corner of the log church.

The land in question was donated by Jacob Strawnman and has been held for church purposes ever since. This organization being in charge of the ministers known as circuit riders, many times not being able to reach their charges but once a month, still properly marked their progress under the leadership of such men as Rev. John Sheldon, Rev. Thomas, Rev. Burgess B. Plummer, Rev. Knapp, Rev. Stafford, Elias Seymour, Rev.

STORM LEAVES DEATH, RUINS IN PATH

Part of the havoc caused by the worst storm the Atlantic coast states have experienced in 25 years as it followed its path of destruction, leaving in its wake a toll of at least 20 dead, numerous others with injuries and millions of dollars worth of damage, is shown in these pictures. Attesting the fury of the gale, a home at Seabright, N. J., is shown at top as it is tossed and battered by the heavy seas. In another part of the same town, a $50,000 home, pictured in the background at the right, is torn in two by the terrific wind blasts. As the storm struck Long Island, a huge tree was blown over at Hempstead, crushing an automobile beneath it, as pictured at the left. (International News photo).

FLASHES OF LIFE

By The Associated Press

KANSAS CITY—A man who house asked its employees what they did with the wages they received under the N.R.A. Four replied the wages had enabled them to marry. Another said he filed his divorce papers.

NEBRASKA CITY—A World War trenches furnished an idea for Lawrence Gibbs, war veteran, when he lost his job. He found a likely site in the side of a river bank and dug out a neat little shelter. With a stove, bunk and a few utensils he aims to keep out all winter.

BUDAPEST—Andrew, disappointed, upset and discouraged, he thought of a communist side, but just at the crucial moment the rope broke. So he sought out the man who had sold him the rope and preferred a charge of swindling against him.

CHICAGO—The Siebel Institute declares that 32 per cent beer has not completely ousted home brewing—far from it. May taxes paid by total brew manufacturers totaled $24,000, or more than half as much as in the four previous months. The institute blamed "parasitic local taxes" on the legal brew dealers for keeping the home-brewers busy.

Rids pores of curdled soap—ends body odor instantly!

It isn't just the dirt, it's the curdled soap that gets into the pores in this hard water territory...

You think you're clean—but you're not. You think you can't offend with body odor—but you do!

The reason is very simple. Ordinary toilet soaps combine with the minerals in hard water to form "bath tub ring." It gets all over your body. It works into the pores. And it dries up stale perspiration!

Some people try to smother one bad odor with another. Others—wiser in the ways of hard water—employ deep-pore cleansing with free-lathering, odorless Kirk's Castile.

Kirk's Castile, being a 100% pure vegetable oil soap, lathers abundantly, even in hardest water. It goes deep into the pores, mixes with the stale perspiration curds and gets them free. In a twinkling, your body is as fresh and clean smelling as a woodland breeze!

"A Hard Water Miracle"—says Gallon, Ohio, citizen.
 Gallon water is hardest in the world!

Try Kirk's Castile today. It's half again larger, half again heavier than average toilet soaps—an exceptional bargain. Be sure to ask for KIRK'S by name.

A Reasonable Appeal.

For the purpose of heeding Alfred E. Smith's latest message to a country which has accepted him as a straight thinker it is best to forget the man's political history. He has been away from national politics long enough to be entitled to speak as a prominent citizen.

Mr. Smith repeats the fundamental reason for supporting the national recovery program, which is absence of any widely acceptable substitute. "The plan must not fall through lack of individual cooperation but if it should fall, then we must dig in for a long siege and make up our minds that recovery will be slow and painful."

He points out, also, a type of specious reasoning being used by opponents of the code. Support of NRA, he declares, "commits no one to a blanket approval of objectionable methods employed here and there in this campaign. . . . Do not take too seriously the excessive enthusiasm of some of those supporting the national industrial recovery act. . . .

Threats, intimidation, compulsion, boycotts, black-lists and suppression of opinion were never contemplated by NRA and therefore have no rightful place in the picture."

It is unfortunate that so many men who, by virtue of position in their communities, are leaders of thought and action are, also, in positions which are made to bear the brunt of adjustment to the experiment. Because they are in constant contact with the difficulties of reestablishing the people's power to buy goods they frequently are overtly skeptical of the possibilities of the project's success. It is natural that people who have been taught to heed the words of outstanding capitalists should continue to heed them during an experiment which demands sacrifices of capitalism to insure its more profitable continuance. Alfred E. Smith, a successful capitalist, makes a valuable contribution to popular thinking by his appeal for support of the only scheme practical enough to warrant a serious trial.

When Science Falters.

Apprehension over the possibilities of a sleeping sickness epidemic of major proportions in St. Louis is not confined to those who think of themselves merely as potential victims. Persons concerned with and responsible for safeguarding public health are concerned acutely, because they realize the full extent of their helplessness.

They know why sleeping sickness is fatal. They know how it affects the capillary system of the brain to produce the symptom of drowsiness. But they do not know where the infection originates or how to stop it after it has started. They can do no more than falter through a course of treatment and prevention, hoping that nature will perform what they, in their ignorance, are unable to perform.

It is a frightening reminder of many things beyond the protective power of science—a power which sometimes is made to appear far greater than it really is by nature's fortuitous cooperation. It is still possible for tens of thousands of people to die like flies in the best guarded civilization on earth. Another epidemic of influenza could be as fatal as the last one. Even bubonic plague, controlled by knowledge of the way it spread in former times, is not an impossibility.

When science falters, man must fall back on a protector he sometimes carelessly ignores—nature.
St. Louis doctors and health authorities, unable to tell the city's residents how they can protect themselves by artificial means against sleeping sickness, are advising them to prevent exhaustion, to avoid victims of the disease and to be particularly careful of infections in their noses and throats, the probable starting places of the disease. Those are the simplest of rules and, until more knowledge has been gained, the best rules to combat one of the dread scourges of humanity.

Unwarranted.

Mr. Hoover's unwillingness to journey to Detroit to testify regarding the attitude of his administration toward the bank situation in that city last winter seems to be reasonably based. The former president points out that the information he possesses is second-hand; that more complete information can be obtained from officials concerned directly with handling the situation.

It is to be expected that this refusal will be seized upon by Mr. Hoover's more energetic critics, who will try to read into its factual content a tone of reluctance to be examined. If this happens, it will not alarm Mr. Hoover, in all probability. After four years in the pillory, a little belated abuse will not frighten him.

There is neither rhyme nor reason, from the standpoint of actual operation of government, in assuming that the nation's chief executive should be in possession of complete facts concerning a situation with which he dealt through intermediaries. True, Mr. Hoover determined to a large extent the political attitude toward the banking situation, but there is no longer any mystery as to the nature of that attitude and, consequently, nothing to reveal.

Political leadership tried to save a rotten banking structure by refusing to admit its rottenness. From hindsight, it was a ridiculous course of conduct. But even now, with the advantage of hindsight, there are few persons who can outline any method of management which would have prevented what happened.

It was too late to make over the banking system by law and too early to weed out the unfit by decree.
Mr. Hoover was the victim of circumstances—a man with nominal control over a situation which was beyond his control. There is no warrant for dragging him into the post-mortem.

Little Ones and Big Ones.

In no event of the last month has there been a planner appearance of the small business man's relation to a program of planned economy than in the testimony of A. Lincoln Wiser on the NRA test for retail stores. Wiser, president of the United Business Men's association of Chicago, described retailers with small investments as "a cancerous growth that has been gnawing at the vitals of good, honest and fair retailing."

Small retailers, he continued, are the source of unfair competition. Upon the government's ability to do something about them depends the success of the campaign to increase employment and wages.
While they continue to exist, he implies, big retailers will be unable to do anything about the conditions that have been forced upon them by "unfair competition."

Undoubtedly most of the 425,000 retailers with investments under $500—the class described by Wiser—read his statement. Undoubtedly most of them immediately experienced the sensation of rising blood pressure. At last they saw what they had feared to see—an unveiled invitation to the federal government to drive them out of business and take away their slender, but sometimes sufficient, incomes.

Obviously, nothing of the kind is going to happen.
One of the most troublesome difficulties of administering the NRA has arisen from the problems of the small merchant and his total inability, in many cases, to qualify for his blue eagle. The fact that most of them have obtained the insignia does not mean that those difficulties have been surmounted.
In many cases, they merely are being circumvented temporarily.

Small stores are not the most difficult way to distribute merchandise. Their terrific struggle to survive undoubtedly creates unfair and unprofitable competition. Ideally, it would be far better, from the standpoint of planned economy, to eliminate them.
But it happens that efficiency isn't the only measuring stick being used to determine the state of civilization. It is true, also, that a great many people still think of competition as the spice of life. As long as several million people gain their livelihood from modest enterprises, and as long as those people have a voice in government, big ones aren't going to be permitted to gobble up the little ones for the purpose of creating better conditions. It would be a false improvement.

For Example.

American delegates are being groomed for the next session of the world disarmament conference, which meets the middle of October. Norman Davis, who was reported to be through as an emissary of peace a few days ago, is expected nevertheless to sail in another week for the continent to state this government's position.

It is virtually the same as that it took on the occasion of President Roosevelt's message to the heads of governments last spring. The United States will join in any reasonable plan, will, in short, subscribe wholeheartedly to the principle of universal disarmament.

There may be some difficulty about details. For more than a decade all enlightened governments have been kept from disarming by details. A recent complication which may be mentioned at Geneva when the delegates assemble once more to state their objections to this or that plan is a shipbuilding program in the United States, which has nothing to do with the subject before the conference, but which conceivably might cause delegates to believe that the United States has no distinct aversion to the equipment of war.

Comment of the Press

A SOLUTION FOR KIDNAPING.
It has been painfully and increasingly evident that if organized crime is to be checked in America it must be met on its own grounds, fought with its own weapons, outwitted on its own terms and given an extra dose of the medicine it would administer to its victims. That has been a problem with all forms of professional, commercialized crime. It has been practically baffling with relation to kidnaping. Here was a crime in which the perpetrators seemed to have all the advantage. Not only did they operate with the utmost secrecy, but they imposed secrecy, through threat of death, upon their helpless victims and members of their families.

So, from the moment, usually the late moment, that the law became advised of a kidnapping, it was at a disadvantage. The evidence it needed for apprehension of the offenders might be had only with extreme difficulty, if at all. The crime had been planned carefully, its perpetrators were familiar with the police or other officers of the law and had studied ways of evading them. So kidnaping has spread.

How deal with such a crime, with a reasonable promise of success? A national or federal police force has been proposed, not only for this, but for other crime. Frank J. Loesch, former chairman of the Chicago crime commission and a recognized authority on the subject, modifies the proposal by suggesting that a secret, nation-wide organization be formed for the specific task of rooting kidnapers.
Mr. Loesch, in an article reprinted in The Star's morning issue of Saturday, takes the position that the federal secret service is not large enough for this task, that its members are or can be known to kidnapers or their political friends and that its work is restricted to interstate crimes. What he proposes is a privately financed, extralegal force, yet a powerful agency that would work with the authorities. At the same time it could, by its secret character, form contacts with kidnapers, their confederates, women or other friends and obtain information in ways that would be impossible for any kind of official or agency now at work.

In view of the extended experience of Mr. Loesch and of his long study of criminals and their methods, this proposal merits unusual attention. It may offer possibilities of solving one crime problem that has become especially acute. The plan could be worked out without the delays incident to legislation or the uncertainties that often accompany governmental or political procedure. It suggests to the private citizen a means of protection that otherwise might be much harder to obtain.—Kansas City Star

Kidney Disease Easy To Prevent.

I am sorry to say that kidney disease is still one of the most common causes of death. Though our knowledge of this disease has greatly increased, it continues to take its yearly toll. This is indeed unfortunate. Like other disorders, many diseases of the kidney are difficult to cure, but most of them are easy to prevent.

Most disorders of the kidney are of a chronic nature. They develop over a course of years and in many instances the sufferer is unaware of his trouble until it has reached an advanced stage. But the disease can be detected in its early stages by means of special tests.

Many neglect the disorder and seek medical advice only when it is too late to remove the underlying cause. Often, serious kidney involvement develops as a complication of some childhood disease.
For example, it may be a complication of scarlet fever, or of certain infections of the throat, acute tonsillitis and other infections. In such cases dangerous poisons circulate in the blood stream and reach the kidney.

If the parent knows of this danger, and sees to it that proper precautions are taken, kidney complications can be avoided. Proper hygiene, temperance in eating, care of the teeth, and removal of all centers of infection, are important precautions for everybody to take. Repeated visits to the physician for kidney tests and urinalysis are imperative after acute disease.

In addition to infections, faulty diet and indiscretions in eating are other factors that must be considered as possible causes of kidney disease. Since the kidneys are essentially filters, and serve to remove the poisons which accumulate in the blood, an increase in these poisons leads to continued irritation of these organs. Alcohol, nicotine, caffeine and other toxic substances are irritating and harmful to a weakened or diseased kidney.

No one will deny the vital relationship of the kidneys to health and life. Though it is possible to survive without a stomach, part of the intestines, the eyes and other

HERRICK'S "ACCIDENTAL" "OPPORTUNITY"

Myron T. Herrick confessed himself a believer in the moral taught by John J. Ingall's well known poem "Opportunity," that men often won success or failed according, as they recognized and seized opportunity as it came their way, but he felt his work in France, during the World War, which gave him a world reputation, was literally thrust upon him.

When Woodrow Wilson was elected in 1912, Herrick submitted his resignation, expecting William F.
McCombs, who had been chairman of the Democratic national campaign committee, to be named to succeed him. McCombs went to Paris, Herrick showed him around and even introduced him as the new ambassador but McCombs shied away from the post because he found that one must be a rich man to conduct an embassy. In 1914, therefore, Wilson named W. G.
Sharp of Ohio, who did not wish to leave home at once, as ambassador to France. Meantime, the break in the war came and it was deemed best to hold Herrick at Paris. Thus he was to stay in Paris during the thrilling and perilous days of the German approach, when the French moved their capital to Bordeaux but Herrick, on his own volition, chose to stay in Paris and look after American interests.

THE GIRL'S HOBBY.

For some obscure reason hobbies are far more usual among men than among women. Whether this has anything to do with the fact that women seem more liable to nervous smashes than men seems worth considering.

Practically every nervous collapse in middle-life can be traced back to some cause built up in childhood.
It seems, therefore, eminently reasonable to start preventing them at the time the foundations of life are being laid.

The woman who has a deep and abiding interest in life is not apt to find herself, after her children have gone out into the world, full of resentment and self-pity at the prospect of a succession of empty years ahead, and to take it out in hysteria, or melancholia.

An interest in life is a heritage from childhood, and if we really love our daughters we will see to it that life in itself—not life spelled only in terms of husband and children—holds possibilities of happiness.

To find a hobby for a girl is not easy, for it is going contrary to the traditions of all time, and the girl herself, with only the vaguest conception of the future, and what it may hold is very apt to be indifferent or actually hostile to the development of any special interest.

Homemaker's
Question Box

Question—I have a straw hat that has become quite soft and limp. Could you suggest a method of stiffening it?

Answer—There are several ways to give straw hats body. One common type of sizing is shellac. This should be clear and colorless for use on light colored straws, while shellac of matching color should be used on dark straws. All shellac must be quite thin if it is to be used on hats. It should be diluted at least one-half with alcohol. Take up only a small amount of the dilute shellac on a small brush and rub it well into the straw. Stuff the crown of the hat with clean white tissue paper before shellacking and allow the paper to remain in it until the hat is thoroughly dry. If you put too much shellac on your brush the straw will become soaked through and the paper will stick to the inside of the crown. Keep in mind that a hat will take on the shape it is allowed to dry in.

A solution of gum arabic is used for sizing straws of any color and is recommended rather than shellac for use on leghorns and panamas that have become limp. The solution is made as follows: Dissolve two level tablespoons of powdered gum arabic in one cup of boiling water. Strain and allow to cool. Apply to hat with a brush or soft clean cloth. Gum arabic as a sizing material leaves the straw dull and only slightly stiffened, which is highly desirable this season.

Mr. and Mrs. Donald L. Cain of Cleveland, whose marriage took place Wednesday, are on a wedding trip to Montreal. Mrs. Cain before her marriage was Miss Mary Barry, daughter of W. C. Barry of Cleveland, formerly of Marion. She was a member of the Harding High school graduating class of 1930, and was well known here.

The wedding ceremony was solemnized at 5 o'clock in the afternoon in the chapel of the First Baptist church of Cleveland. Miss Katherine Barry and George Salisbury, both of Cleveland, were the attendants.

A Navy Blue Crepe Ensemble

Trimmed in gray fur, and worn with blue accessories, was chosen by the bride for her wedding. Her shoulder corsage was of gardenias.

The maid of honor was in an ensemble of gray crepe.

The couple left on a boat trip to Buffalo and from there will motor to Montreal, returning to Cleveland soon after Sept. 4. They will be at home at 3444 Superior Park drive.

Marion Friends of Mrs. Cain

Miss Mary Oborn
Weds Howard Click

The home of Mrs. Ora Oborn on the Richmond place was the scene of a pretty wedding yesterday morning at 11:30 o'clock when her daughter Mary Gertrude became the bride of Howard Sylvester Click, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Click of the Richmond place.

The double ring ceremony was read by Dr. Charles E. Turley, pastor of Epworth M. E. church, before an improvised altar of flowers, ferns and palms. The immediate families and close friends of the couple attended.

Proceeding the ceremony, a trio composed of Raymond Hall and William Ford, clarinets, and Warren Hall, flute, played "At Dawn" and "I Love You Truly."

The bride wore a gown of French blue, trimmed in embroidered white organdy, with shoes and accessories in harmonizing tones. Her arm bouquet was of Braireliff roses and lavender statice, tied with white tulle and a shower of white pompon asters.

A two-course luncheon was served following the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Click left immediately for an extended eastern wedding trip which will include visits to Niagara Falls, West Point, Philadelphia and Washington, D. C.

For traveling, Mrs. Click wore gray with white hat, shoes and gloves.

Upon their return Mr. and Mrs. Click will make their home on a farm southeast of Marion.

Lake Erie Is Too Rough for Local Excursionists

Two recent boat excursions on Lake Erie in which many Marion county residents were passengers gave a majority of the "fresh-water seagoers" their first taste of seasickness. The adventure also provided conversation matter for many residents of western and northwestern Marion county for several months to come.

The first of the two was held last Sunday, when a band of high school students, headed by Kenneth Ruckman, rural school music instructor, took a four-hour excursion to Put-in-Bay. There were 42 in the band and approximately 168 other Marion county residents in the party, many of them relatives of the band members.

The cruise had been anticipated for several days, and most of the families had packed huge baskets with picnic dinners. Newspaper reports that Lake Erie had been "somewhat" rough, and that whitecaps had been dancing over the surface of the lake didn't disturb their plans one whit.

Many of them crowded to the rail of the deck as soon as the boat started anxious to see all that was to be seen. One man and his daughter noticed a particularly large wave approaching, and reacted about its size. A few seconds later the same wave hit the boat a smashing blow, and poured bucketsful of water on the portion of the deck where they were standing, drenching them.

The boat charged along merrily, but the passengers suddenly seemed to lose interest in the trip. Several began to inquire how far it was to Put-in-Bay. One member looked at his picnic basket dubiously.

As the waves continued to pound the boat mercilessly, a number of prospective picnickers apparently found something of interest at the deck rails, leaning far over them for intervals of several seconds. That was the signal for a general contagion of seasickness among the Marion county party.

When the boat reached Put-in-Bay, the excursionists left the boat with sighs of relief, carrying the picnic baskets with them, but not daring to look at the baskets or think of food. Most of the baskets came back unopened.

A second similar excursion left Sandusky on Tuesday for Detroit, with many Marion county residents aboard, including a Grand Prairie school band in charge of R. T. Thew, music instructor. Among the passengers was County Auditor Earl E. Thomas. This trip was virtually a repetition of the Sunday excursion.

It so happened that a federal inspector made the boat quit taking on passengers before all members of the prospective excursion party got aboard. Several band members were among those left standing at the dock. Some of them had tears in their eyes as the boat departed without them.

Little did they know how fortunate they were, one member of the party who boarded the boat said. Most of those on the boat had plenty of tears in their eyes before the trip ended, but for a different reason, he said.

"Before I take any more boat rides," one excursionist said with an air of finality, "that lake will have to be as smooth as a mirror and the weather forecast is going to be 'fair'."
